Photoshop Layers Adobe Photoshop uses a layer-based editing system. A group of layers or objects is known as a page, a layer is the first object in a page, and a layer group is a group of pages. The layers in your Photoshop page can be named as you like. To name a layer, choose File > New from the menu and then choose Layer. Give the layer a name and click OK. You will usually work with a whole series of layers that represent objects in your image. To create a new page, choose File > New > Page from the menu and select the desired number of pages. You can create as many pages as you need by selecting the number of pages you want. As you create layers in Photoshop, the objects on those layers are arranged in ascending order from left to right on the page. To rearrange your layers, select a layer and click Move on the toolbar or choose Edit > Move in the menu bar. You can move the layer all the way to the left or right. Some Photoshop tutorials recommend that you keep objects on their own separate layers. That way, you can edit one layer without affecting the others. If you create a new page from File > New, the default page layout arranges the objects to the left and will move them to their new page. Each object in your Photoshop image is called a layer. If you place multiple objects over one another, they can be combined into one layer. You can combine the objects into a single layer. You can create a separate layer to modify an object and create a new layer to work on a separate object. Each individual object in a Photoshop layer is called a layer. I am afraid of summer because we never have a minute to cook. My daughter does some and my son doesn't like cooking to much either so it's usually mac and cheese or hot dogs and bottled gravy. Please give us a guide! Thank you.

Q: How to get coordinates from a KendoUI Bitmap In order to try to draw a shape in a KendoUI Image control, I would like to get the "x" and "y" coordinates. Unfortunately, I have no luck so far. What am I doing wrong? The shape is defined like this: `e.model.attributes.shape = new kendo.drawing.Shape({ type:'rectangle', width: 30, height: 30, fill: 'blue' });` Then I create the control, set the required size, and add the image. In the `onClick`, I want to get the shape's coordinates. `var view = $('#example').data('kendoView');` `var container = $('#example');` `var image = $('');` `container.append(image);` `var shape = $(container[0].getElementsByName('')[0]).find('img').attr('src', image.attr('src'));` `image.width(container.width());` `image.height(container.height());` `var x = ???` `var y = ???` Here is the demo: A: Try this: `$(container[0].getElementsByName('')[0]).find('img').each(function() { console.log(this); console.log(this.x); console.log(this.y); });` `/* * @file kernel_wlan_manager.h * WLAN Manager Kernel Definition /` `/ * Copyright (c) 2018 chunyang (chunyang@inburst.com) * * This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it * under the terms of the GNU General Public License version 2 as published by * the Free Software Foundation. * * This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT * ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or * FITNESS FOR`
