[Protective effect of daunorubicin on the rat heart mitochondrial membranes studied by the spin probe method]. daunorubicin and its aglycone doxorubicin are the drugs of the anthracyclines family used in the treatment of the acute myelogenous leukemia. It was revealed for the first time that daunorubicin and its aglycone showed a protective effect on the rat heart mitochondria. The lipid fluidity of the mitochondria membrane is susceptible to variations in the hydrophobic region and the polarization of the spin probe liposome of cytochrome c free radical by electron spin resonance technique. It has been shown that daunorubicin at a concentration of 10 micrograms/ml prevents the mitochondrial membrane damage due to an incubation period of 1 hour and a concentration of 10 micrograms/ml.
