Boccherini is especially known for his 1761 collection of solo violin sonatas, which are regarded as important forerunners to the modern violin sonata. His music, particularly his violin concertos and sonatas, had considerable influence in the musical world from the late 18th century. Biography Boccherini was born in Venice. The family had been Musiciani, which meant that for centuries they had been a family of harpsichordists. Boccherini's grandfather, Gaetano, was a music teacher. It was his late grandfather that had given him his early lessons in playing violin. At age five, Boccherini went to the Conservatorio di San Pietro a Majella in Naples to study, where he studied under Antonio Barelli, the director of the conservatory. Boccherini entered the Royal Academy of Music of Naples in 1755 when he was 18 years old. While a student at the conservatory, he began to study the violin, at which he quickly became noted. His first violin composition, a sonata for solo violin (No. 2), was completed on 26 September 1759. Boccherini was offered three positions in Italy and subsequently he left the Conservatory of Naples to accept the first; he accepted the second only in April 1766, and the third (in Florence) on May 1766, where he remained for five years. He did not perform much in his early years, and concentrated his activities on composing. He also studied keyboard instruments, especially the harpsichord and organ, and gave concerts with his teacher Antonio Barelli. On 6 June 1767, at age 22, Boccherini left Italy to go to London. He arrived in England on 9 January 1768, and after a year and a half of working, he was admitted to the Royal Academy of Music. He remained in London for nine years, and in 1777 he returned to Naples, where he was director of the Royal Academy of Music.
