We must realize that the "Non-Negotiable" issues are nothing but artificial and the Muslim countries have the freedom to decide their own fate. Those issues can be resolved amicably because they are political in nature. Non-negotiable issues are a serious matter in the Arab world. Resolving such issues may help strengthen our countries' relationships with the Arab states and prevent a second front from opening. However, many Arab members of the U.N. Security Council would have loved to use the Lebanon Crisis as an opportunity to confront Israel on the "Non-Negotiable" issues. In fact, the list of the "Non-Negotiable" issues within the context of the region's internal policies and national security ranges from the future of the Palestinian state, the future of the Gaza Strip, the security of the Sudanese regime, the future of Darfur, the Middle East's nuclear issue, the "State of the Palestinians" and the Palestinian question in general and the Israeli West Bank barrier in particular. Share or comment on this article: A new generation of predictive text (as twitter is developed) - transburgh ===== demallien

This is a really nice idea. I have been following twitter for a while, and have found that the crazy-fast joke-spinning that was possible in Usenet surfaced as a big feature on twitter. In theory this can be extended to much more applications. There is very little existing software that can find your unique keystrokes and guess at what you will be typing next, and as with everything technology-related, the authors of existing software are always going to be lagging behind the people putting the money into it.

However, an interesting twist would be to use your existing twitter software, but to have that software doing the prediction - that is, when you "go to profile" for example, a popup shows up with the prediction, and you would probably then click the button to submit the prediction. You would get the notion of unique text being a similarity score between that and the text that you were typing, but you'd be getting the benefit of using the twitter software. Does anyone know if this idea of unique text prediction is actually feasible? ----- transburgh Sorry if this is off-topic, but does anyone know how to search for a particular term in Twitter? For example, if I were searching for a particular influential person, I would really like a way to do that without Twitter wasting a bunch of real estate on having to type out the name and then find it. ----- sans-serif Oh, how I dream of that technology! Prenatal and lactational exposure to alcohol and psychosocial development of children at 24 months: a follow-up study in Hong Kong. To examine the effects of prenatal and lactational alcohol consumption on the cognitive, socio-emotional development of children at 24 months. The study employed a 6-month period of birth cohort design with follow-up at 2, 12 and 24 months. A total of
