Embryonal rhabdomyosarcoma in a child with small cell lung carcinoma. We report a case of embryonal rhabdomyosarcoma in a child with small cell lung carcinoma. The child presented with a rapidly enlarging left arm mass, corresponding to embryonal rhabdomyosarcoma. The patient developed a massive mediastinal and bilateral hilar metastases. A diagnosis of stage IV embryonal rhabdomyosarcoma with lung involvement was made. Simultaneously, a diagnosis of small cell lung carcinoma was made. Chemotherapy was given, and the patient died 3 months later because of pulmonary metastases. We discuss the problems of differential diagnosis in children, the clinical presentation of embryonal rhabdomyosarcoma, the type of chemotherapy given in the treatment of this disease, and its compatibility with the problem of small cell lung carcinoma.A novel JAG1-JAG2 mutation in a patient with hemorrhagic syndrome. Hemophilia A is an X-linked bleeding disorder caused by mutations in the factor VIII (FVIII) gene. About two-thirds of the cases are due to missense mutations in the A1-domain of the FVIII molecule. Haemophilia A can be complicated by inhibitors, a rare complication which may occur in patients with

"The heavy rains caused flash floods and damage to the roads, especially in the East Jerusalem neighborhoods of Sheikh Jarrah and Beit Hanina," Moawieh Hussein, manager of the West Bank's Civil Defense, told Ma'an. The A-4 westbound road to Ramallah was closed in the wake of flooding and washouts, Hussein said. Water also flooded several streets near Ramallah. Sixty-five roads in the West Bank were damaged, as well as 5,000 meters of power cables, and the damage in the region has been attributed to Israel's policy of restricting the West Bank's water supply, the Civil Defense said. Elsewhere in the West Bank, about 6,000 people have been impacted by a water leak in the village of An-Nahda, southeast of Nablus, and about 6,000 people have been left without electricity since Tuesday. Forces stationed at Beit Ummar, a village near Hebron, warned villagers of a severe thunderstorm warning that was issued on Tuesday afternoon. The threat of further thunderstorms has forced the Civil Defense to order residents of the village to stay at home, and provide shelter in case of flash floods. Nablus has also been affected by flash floods and heavy downpours. Qamariya, a village to the east of Nablus, was also hit by flash floods and rain on Tuesday. The village's residents were advised to stay at home and avoid driving if possible. The Civil Defense also warned that a dam near the city of Tulkarem, to

Autogamy in maize is initiated from the anthers, which have already completed meiosis, when they are just about to release the pollen. The present study examines the effects of ethylene on anther indehiscence in maize and attempts to associate this response with the time of pollen release. Mature anthers were treated with 50 ppm ethylene for 4 h or for 24 h and then allowed to dehisce. Dehiscence of the anthers, which were treated for 4 h, took place after just over 21 h; the shorter treatment resulted in dehiscence after about 10 h. Dehiscence was also observed in the control anthers treated for 24 h. Dehiscence of the short-term treated anthers was accompanied by an increase in the rate of tapetum development. When dehiscence occurred, the tapetal cells did not begin to show collapse, as seen in
