It runs as a service and I have seen that I can just kill it or start it from the task manager. What does the Error, as well as how can I get rid of it? A: The first error that you are seeing is caused by a max_allowed_packet issue on your MySQL server. The issue is something to do with how large the packet has to be. You can define a variable to define the packet size in your my.cnf for your MySQL servers. This variable can be set to the total size that you want or you can just set it to some fraction of the total size that you want to allow. The second error that you are seeing is somewhat more insidious and could have a lot of causes. There is a max_allowed_packet issue that is from the client connecting to your server. Can you confirm that there is a process on your server that is connected to mysql? If so, you need to kill that process and then restart MySQL. Tuesday, February 10, 2012 Feb. 12 By Greg O'Dell In news out of the Senate filibuster debate, President Obama on Feb. 12 called for a change in filibuster rules to prevent future obstruction of important legislation by minority party filibusters. The president said in a news conference, "It's long past time to ensure that the Senate operates on a full and fair basis, and that the American people can have confidence that we're doing the people's business." Congressmen are on record that they want to do business with the American people, but the majority party has been prevented by the opposition party from doing so. In March 2011, Congress passed a long-term extension of the federal debt limit, and the extension included the Treasury Department's desire for the Federal Reserve to increase the money supply, thus helping sustain growth and job creation by increasing the supply of money in the economy. At that time, the minority Democrats, led by then-Majority Leader Harry Reid, simply did not allow consideration of the bill in the Senate. They
