Description Originally released in 1984 and made famous by the hit songs "Yo Soy," "El Dia Que Me Quieres," and "Quiero," the first two singles from the Spanish super group Los Dudas, this recording had nothing to do with the television series. The album contains the singles of the album, sung in Spanish, and then they would sing each of the songs from the television series. The song "Yo Soy" entered Billboard charts in Spain, Mexico, Chile, Argentina and Peru and started selling in the record stores of these countries. "El D3a Que Me Quieres" and "Quiero" sold out all the radio stations that played them in 1989. Brain-storming with the clever new Grooveshark app Convincing advertisers that video and audio works in the social, search and mobile world of the 21st century has never been easier than it is with apps like Grooveshark, which has added a slew of new features for iOS, including the ability to play YouTube and SoundCloud videos, as well as Facebook and Twitter posts. "People just have to search for things they'd like to listen to, and Grooveshark surfaces that in a really neat way," says Spencer Kebler, co-founder and CEO of the new, cheekily named Grooveshark app. "People just want to find what they like, and, then, they like," Kebler says. "It's the most intuitive way for someone to discover something they've never heard before." Kebler,
