Adobe Photoshop Lightroom is a great app for any photographer or aspiring photographer who loves organizing photos. It can be used both as a cataloguing and editing tool. Ghost Noise, a new feature that automatically reduces noise and grain, is one of my favorite editing features. The app has a variety of tools and filters, and its pre-defined memory templates help to simplify many common digital photography tasks. Adobe Photostitch is a great app for combining multiple photos into one photo. Although previously a desktop application, Adobe Photoshop Lightroom also gives me control over my editing workflow. Its import and export features allow me to jump between my laptop and iPad Pro - a real benefit to my workflow. With Lightroom features, the iPad Pro allows you to get a raw shot presented to you quickly. This is particularly useful for people with speed issues like me. It's going to take me hours to organise and edit photos that were taken in 15 minutes. I was able to capture a photo of an Intel open house in 15 minutes and Photoshop was able to stitch the photos together in less than half an hour. If at that point, I use Lightroom to edit the photo, it's easy enough to get some of the best results. It's no Photoshop, but if we included Photoshop, it would definitely hit a higher price point. Adobe Creative Cloud is a membership program that will give you access to all of the desktop applications (currently Lightroom, InDesign and Photoshop) for a monthly fee. It's a small investment, but you can add further to your membership by paying for the mobile plan upgrades. Again, these plans and upgrades may come at a cost.

The new Share for Review feature in Photoshop (beta) allows designers to edit in Photoshop and perform peer review from within the program by sending files to a Review server. The files sent remain secure because they are in the cloud on Adobe’s servers. The sender is able to look at other reviews before making changes and can see an updated version of the file that is then sent back to the designer after changes are made. A two-factor authentication enables only one person or device to access a Review. While the feature is new, Adobe plans to expand it considerably over the next 12 months.
