The Family Respite Center provides respite from the responsibilities of caring for your loved one, allowing you to take a break from caregiving to attend to your own well-being or to attend to the needs of another family member. In addition, the Family Respite Center is where you can connect with other caring individuals who can provide information, emotional support, and an opportunity to share experiences with one another. Bipolar disorder is associated with a substantially increased risk of seizures. It has been noted that, in bipolar disorder, generalized tonic-clonic and tonic seizures are more likely to be induced by the mood stabilizer lamotrigine than by lithium. We review the available literature regarding the risk of seizures associated with bipolar disorder and to consider the underlying pathophysiology, underlying comorbid conditions, pharmacology, and management options for this condition. We have found no studies on the interaction between bipolar disorder and epilepsy that are controlled for specific drugs, diagnosis, or comorbid conditions. Evidence suggests that bipolar disorder is associated with a substantially increased risk of epilepsy, and the pharmacological treatment for bipolar disorder may promote or prevent seizures. The clinical management of epilepsy in bipolar disorder is complex. Diagnosis and diagnosis-related treatment of epilepsy in bipolar disorder may be influenced by specific comorbid conditions such as anxiety, depressive disorder, and alcohol or substance abuse. General cartilage degeneration is a major limiting factor in cartilage-related joint diseases such as osteoarthritis (OA) and rheumatoid arthritis. The most common and earliest symptomatic stage of OA is generally associated with proteoglycan loss and biomechanical instability, but the cellular mechanisms that trigger this initial proteoglycan loss and biomechanical instability are poorly understood. We have found that in articular cartilage explants from pigs with natural degenerative osteoarthritis, there is a unique phenotype that indicates a cell autonomous failure of the chondrocyte in driving biosynthetic processes associated with the extracellular matrix. Because this phenotype is only induced in explants from osteoarthritic cartilage, it provides a powerful new model for studying mechanisms of cartilage degeneration. The specific aims of this project are to: 1) identify the unique gene expression profile associated with the osteoarthritic phenotype of cartilage explants; 2) define the biochemical pathways f988f36e3a
